

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessens Indiana's Telephone Privacy law. This law has improved the quality of time spent with my family in the evenings. I used to get five, six, sometimes more calls in the evening from telemarketers. Now when the phone rings I know it is from someone one of us wants to talk with. Also, my husband works nights and sleeps in the daytime. This law has improved his ability to sleep during the day since he isn't hearing the phone ring. Now he can keep the phone in his room turned on for important calls.
